PROPEL ORTHOTIC SYSTEM

A comprehensive foot care system designed to restore function and provide unequalled protection for your amputee patients.

Propel Orthotics:

Transmetatarsal or other partial foot amputations present unique biomechanical challenges for patients and foot care providers alike. Compromised metatarsal joint function distorts or eliminates the propulsive phase of gait. The inability of these patients to properly “toe – off” results in unsteady gait patterns and increases the likelihood of future tissue breakdown and other related compensatory pathology.

The Propel Orthotic helps to stabilize the foot within a normal footwear environment. The Propel shell is constructed from Superform, a thin and lightweight thermoplastic composite material. The positive casts are modified so the module can be extended to the full length of the shoes.

A custom-made prosthesis (filler) is crafted from the positive model of the foot. The filler is placed adjacent to the amputation site on the full length module and functionally stabilizes the foot inside the shoe. These fillers are constructed from medical grade Plastazote foam and are covered with the highest quality 35 durometer EVA foam materials.

Langer also includes a custom made orthotic for the contralateral foot. This device is semi-flexible and covered to the toes with the same EVA material used in the Propel Orthotic.

The result of this unique design is a functional, yet protective device that will help all of your transmetatarsal and partial foot amputee patients.

The Propel System doesn't stop there and neither should you.

Foot care providers should attempt to manage and control the footwear choices of all patients. For the amputee patient, this is critical. The footwear environment that patients function in can have as much, or more influence on outcomes as does the therapeutic modalities themselves.

With Langer's Propel Orthotic System you can order from a selection of our shoes for your patients. The styles that were selected possess design characteristics and other features that make them the perfect compliment for the Propel Orthotic. Each shoe is an extra depth design with spacious toe box areas. The shoes all possess anatomically correct sole flexion points and are available in a wide array of widths and lengths.

Suggested Codes: L5000

Propel Packages:

Propel Transmet

This system is designed for the patient that has a full transmetatarsal amputation. The package includes a Propel Orthotic made from a semi-rigid Superform shell containing a full prosthetic buttress (filler). There is also an accommodative device included for the unaffected side.

Included in this package is a Silipos Partial Foot Sock (Suggested Reimbursement Code L8417). These socks are designed to fit comfortably over the transmet stump and contain a polymer gel which when released, moisturizes and softens affected areas.

Propel Partial Foot

This system is designed for the patient that has a partial foot amputation (ie. Hallux, or digits). The package includes a Propel Orthotic made from semi-flexible Superform shell containing a partial foot toe filler. There is also an accommodative device included for the unaffected side.

GUARANTEE

All shoes are guaranteed for 6 months under normal wear conditions. Within this time frame, if the sole separates from the shoe or the stitching comes apart, the customer may exchange the shoe. Shoes that show signs of abuse such as being left in water etc., are not exchangeable. Shoes that show signs of wear in the lining by the toe are not considered a defect, but rather a sign that the shoe is too small.
